

Sinclair
Broadcasting's
decision to force
their stations to
air an anti-Kerry
documentary days
before the election
is not only a
disgraceful example
of journalistic malfeasance, but is also a clear example
of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the
public airwaves free
of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies
control the
airwaves, we get
more of what's good
for the bottom line
and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something
produced at "News
Central" far away,
it's more important
that we see local
news and more
substantive,
in-depth coverage
about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions
show why we need to strengthen media
ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license
renewal process
needs to involve
more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
